Inside Views of the Comptroller's Books-Interesting Details of the Outgo and the Income of the Third City of the Union

The HERALD's exposé of Brooklyn's financial situ ation and the grave embarrassments by which her efficials and taxpayers are confronted has stirred Beecherdom to the centre and thence to the circum ference that lays hold on the "county towns" and affects even the wave washed sands of Coney Island. But, in spite of the volume of anpaid taxes and assessments, General Steinmets, the republican Comptroller, insists that matters financial might be very much worse, and lays the gravamen of Brooklyn's troubles at the teet of the East River Bridge. He says, in response to the HERALD, that the following is a just synopsis of the changes in the liabilities of the city down to

Net increase.....$1,229,768 83 And in explanation of the year's increase he says it was caused by the issue of the bonds for the comquired by law, which during the year amounted to $1,650,000. Excluding them there would have been a reduction of the debt to the amount of $420,281 17, indicating a gradual reduction of the city debt after the bridge is completed, provided no large work is inaugurated.

The aggregate receipts of the year amount to $14,200,933 45 amount to $13,147,571 66 In this connection it is interesting to note some of the chief items in the annual expense budget of our sister city. Quoting from the Comptroller's books, we find as follows:—

THE FINANCIAL STATUS.

According to Comptroller Steinmetz the total city ebt amounted to $42,257,500; and the total assests

are as follows:—
Cash on hand in treasury..$3,961,080 27
Less amount not distributed (taxes of 1878)...... 2,203,985 79 Amount of uncollected assessments....
Amount of special improvement assessments confirmed but not levied....

Amount of taxes due and unpuid, the tax levy of 1878 and previous years and special improvements. Balance of certificates of unpaid taxes of 1870 and 1871, purchased by the New York and Brooklyn Bridge stock. 7,900,000 00 Assets over liabilities $17,949,907 84
This assumes, of course, that the assets are available. The real estate and personal property owned by the city is put down as follows:

| Board of Education $3,018,027
| Fire Department 309,500
| Police Department 355,000
| Park and Public Buildings 24, 778,000
| Sundries 39,625
| Personal property 190,000

Total valuation. $28,780,162

No one imagines that the parks, public buildings or other property above enumerated would net any figure approximating to $28,000,000, and if the tages and assessment of the city are to be regarded in the same light it can hardly be deemed strange that men like William M. Everts, Gordon L. Ford and other ambitious purchasers of real estate in the "choice spois" of the City of Churches prefer to abandon it rather than be devoured by it.

Beference to the estimate of Mr. Cadley, Clerk of the Board of Supervisors, shows that, so far as the expenses of the city proper were concerned, 1879 was not thought of as an extravagant era. That estimate is as follows:—

Principal of city debt. $17,000,000 00 Interest of city debt. $17,000,000 00 Interest of city debt. $17,000,000 00 General purposes. $70,225 27 Board of Education 711,000 00 Department of Fire and Buildings 340,800 00 Department of Fire and Buildings 340,800 00 Department of Fire and Buildings 340,800 00 Board of Health $40,000 00 Baiaries of city officers $11,380 00 Board of Elections $123,686 56

FEELING IN THE CITY.

That there is a growing anxiety in Brooklyn in reference to the financial status is self-evident. Following in the wake of the Herallo the local magnates, newspapers and real estate factotums are agitating the subject of reform, economy and relief. One bold party suggests a suspension of interest for three years. This, it is urged, would deprive Brooklyn officials of the borrowing facility now so facilely ruinous. After repudiating interest for three years, turing which season moneys would accumulate, economies would be enforced and hard pan be reached—the interest to be funded and bonds issued for it, on which, as on the existing liabilities, interest would be paid and the obligations be gradually reduced. An old resident and prominent real estate owner sail yesterday that if Brooklyn would return to the old system there would be no trouble. In former years contractors were paid by the city, but not until the city had collected the assessments. In other words, the property improved was the source to which the contractor had to look for his pay. Now the city pays when the work is done, whether the party benefited pays or not. The excitement now well under way promises to pay well. Officials see that the HERALD's story has not only interested but stimulated property holders to action, and reform will doubtless be the watchword of the hour.

TAXATION IN QUEENS COUNTY.

The Board of Supervisors of Queens county yes terday completed the tax levy for the present year. The amount to be raised by each town for State, The amount to be raised by each town for State, county and town purposes, with the rate on the $100, is as follows:—Jamaica, $69,604 25, rate, $2 02; Oyster Bay, $57,588 86, rate, $1 50; Long Island City, $34,105 12, rate, $2 01; Newtown, $107,754 07, rate, $4 70; Flushing, $112,693 57, rate, $2 54; Hempstead, $39,774 11, rate, $1 62; North Hempstead, $47,286 69, rate, $1 14. In Newtown the rate is increased over last year twenty cents, in Long Island City it is increased forty-one cents and in Flushing eight cents, all the other towns having a decrease.

The bonded indebtedness of Newtown is $470,000; of Jamaica, $40,900; Flushing, $133,500. Long Island City owes the country for back taxes the sum of $73,000; the school teachers are owed nine months' wages; some of the city's property is in the hands of the Sheriff, and there are a number of unsatisfied judgments on file. The Board inserted $25,000 of the tax deficiency in the levy for this year.

RAPID TRANSIT.

PRELIMINARY REPORT OF THE COMMISSION FOR THE ANNEXED DISTRICT.

Mayor Cooper yesterday afternoon received a re-Board of Rapid Transit Commissioners. It says, in substance:- "The labors of the Rapid Transit Commission having reached a point at which a review of their action may prove useful this Board take the liberty of laying before you the following statement of the steps so far taken. Having organized on the 11th of September they invited suggestions as to the best routes for rapid transit railways in the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth railways in the Twenty-third and Twenty-fourth wards. The first thirty days were spent in examining, with a skilful engineer appointed for that purpose, the merits of these suggestions and comparing them with the route designated by the Commissioners appointed April 2, 1879. They passed on the 10th of October a resolution declaring that there was a necessity in the city and county of New York for steam railways in addition to any now existing. The only project of importance was that of an elevated railroad over Third avenue from some point near the Harlem Elver to the village of Fordham; it did not meet the approval of the Board, the objections being that such a road would damage much private property without compensating the owners, and that its cost would be too great. Careful consideration convinced the commission that they could not avoid coincidence with the route designated by the old commission; the present Board have encountered the difficulty which was the reason for the appointment of this commission. By the advise of counsel a resolution was passed October 31, designating certain coincident routes. Variations were not advisable on the east side route, and but a slight deviation on the Fordham avenue branch; on the Central route some variations were adopted. The route designated by the old commission as the Jerome avenue branch was not adopted, and in its place a route was substituted connecting from the bridge crossing the Harlem River at the termination of Eighth avenue to the Central route, near Fleetwood Park, avoiding the tunnel between the Harlem River and Cromwell's Creek, and crossing Jerome avenue branch was made and filed on November 8 for the consideration of the next General Term of the Supreme Court on the relation of the old Board as plaintiffs and this commissions as defendants, legal proceedings having been thus begin all periods fixed by the Rapid Transit act for the action of routes will, when the decision is reached, have the public such confidence that the capital slow of the publi The first thirty days were spent in examining, with a skilful engineer appointed for that purpose,

PUSHED FROM AN "L" TRAIN.

AN EYE WITNESS TO THE "ACCIDENT" AT CHATHAM SQUARE-THE CONDUCTOR DE-CLARED TO BE RESPONSIBLE.

It is a new side to an old story, and it interests everybody who is thrown for a time each day upon the well paid courtesy of the "L" railroad. The public has already been told how Joseph Haynes, a fireman of No. 301 East Eighth street, attempted to board a train on Monday night at Chatham square, and how he was repulsed by the conductor and fell to the track to be crushed by the iron wheels. The statement of Conductor Bloom has appeared in public print; how that Haynes was leaning against and how he was repulsed by the conductor and fell to the track to be crushed by the iron wheels. The statement of Conductor Bloom has appeared in public print; how that Haynes was leaning against a pillar of the station smoking a pipe when the train approached; how he did not stir until the call to start was given, and then, seemingly under the influence of liquor, made a dash for the cars, tried to mount between the platforms and fell through; how the depot men corroborated all that the conductor said, and declared that the man was a victim of his own carelessness.

This was written, read and filed away—the evidence to satisfy a public inquest, when the Coroner did not happen to be headed. Poor Haynes was taken to the Chambers Street Hospital, where his hip was found to be badly lacerated, and cuts and bruisos covered his head and sides.

MORE THAN HIMMELY TO BLAME.

A well known morehant on the train witnessed the whole affair, and yesterday voluntered to the Hikkaald a very different secount of it from that before related. He did not care to appear by name in the premises, but promised to do so cheerfully if he could in that way assist the injured firoman. To adopt his own language:—

"I got on the train at Fifty-third street, between a quarter and ten minutes to ten, and took a seat in the fore part of the second car. I was in a position to see all that occurred at the stations. The conductor in ront of me, who appeared to have charge of the train, first attracted my attention by constantly spirting tobacco jute between his teeth upon the street below. I was thinking how disquating and reckless a practice it was, and how easily a lady's dress in the street night be ruined by it. When we got to chatham square I noticed the man Haynes was a little dilatory in getting to the platform; the street believe the station. However, he had plenty of time to get on beard, when I saw the conductor push him back, slam the gate with one hand and reach for the bell with the other. Haynes looked dazedly at the moving train,

THE COURTS.

There was continued yesterday, before Judge Wallace, in the United States Circuit Court, the trul of a suit brought by John P. Treadwell, a lawyer of Boston, to recover $15,000 for legal serlawyer of Boston, to recover $1,000 for regardervices rendered to several insurance companies in defending suits brought against them by John L.
Randall, of Boston. The Adriatic, Kings County, Mechanics and Traders' and other insurance companies are the defendants. A judgment was given in favor of the insurance companies, who refused to pay Mr. Treadwell his claim for services. The present trial will probably occupy several days.

An Italian laborer, who gave the name of Antonio Martini, became engaged in a quarrel with a fellow countryman—Vincenzo De Leo—on the 5th inst, and stabbed him in the neck with a carving knife, indicting almost a tatal wound. The accused, when arraigned in the Court of General Sessions yesterday by Assistant Distract Attorney Herring, acknowledged his guilt, and Judge Gildersleeve sent him to State Prison for five years.

On the morning of the 17th of September last Police Officer Dooley, of the Eighteenth precibet, after being on post all night wont home, but just as he was entering his wife's apartment caught a milk-man named James Warren, of No. 105 East 121st street, issuing therefrom and fired at him, inflicting a dangerous wound. Warren made an ante-mortem statement relative to his visit to Mrs. Dooley, which he subsequently withdrew. The papers in the case were submitted yesterday to the Grand Jury, who dismissed the complaint.

Officer Nugent, who was arrested on the 14th of June last on a charge of complicity in the Manhattan Bank robbery, and has been in prison ever since, sought to obtain meantime his pay as policeman. A motion to compel the Police Commissioners to pay his salary came up for argument yesterday, before Judge Brady, in Supreme Court, Chambers. The answer was that he had done no police duty since his arrest, and therefore was entitled to no pay. Judge Brady, so held and dismissed the application, with leave to renew it after Nugent's discharge from prison.

There was another hearing yesterday before Surrogate Calvin in the matter of the contest of the will of Samuel Wood, who died leaving most of his money to found a musical college. Dr. Humphrey, the homosopathist, testified to his acquaintance with the deceased and to his knowledge of his habits, both business and social. He said he thought the deceased was rather eccentric and instanced the fact that the latter slept in a bed made of staves and refused to eat with his false teeth. Dr. Otto Rotton, of No. 20 Hanson place, Brooklyn, testified that he first attended the decedent in 1869, and attended him more or less from year to year afterward until his death. He said that in 1875, when he hast saw Mr. Wood, his mind was very weak, although he did not thing him insane.

WARDEN JOHNSON'S JEOPARDY.

In consequence of allowing Edward Lindner, an alleged forger and check raiser, to escape from him while travelling on the railroad from Trenton to Newark last week, Colonel A. J. Johnson, warden of the Essex County Jail, in the latter city, is in danger of being indicted and punished for misdemeaner. Lindner was not handcuffed and was allowed to go unattended to the retiring room on the car. He slipped out of the window, and that was the last slipped out of the window, and that was the last seen of him. Yesterday Judge Depue drew the matter to the attention of the Grand Jury, cited the law in the case and virtually suggested the duty of indicting Johnson. The facts as given of the escape of Lindner show that Colonel Johnson reposed an almost childrike confidence in his prisoner. His brother Charles, who is still held, was arraigned to plead, yesterday, to an indictment for forgery, the accusation being that he passed forged cheeks purporting to have been signed by Bailey & Alling, lumber dealers, of Newark. The trial was set down for Tuesday next.

Conversant as he was with crime and feared as he was by criminals, it naturally caused a sensa tion when, on the 25th of last August M. des Bris sards was robbed of a number of bonds aggregating in value many thousand francs. The circumstances of the case never got much further than the precincts of the official chamber; but it is generally understood that the robbery was a peculiar one and had its share of mystery. At once the intricate machinery of the French bureau was put in motion; but, perfect in confailed to compass the detection of the offender, and the robbery of M. des Brissards' bonds still remains in the hands of i victim for investigation Of course the complete system of inquiry to which secret agents of the Paris police resort was exercised to its fullest extent, and all the domestic connec-tions of the family and the character of their servants and intimates were overhauled. But all to no purpose. In this quest the liability to suspicion of Elise, a young woman who was employed as a seamstress in the des Brissards family, may have been subjected to inquiry, but as that young woman was living in another quarter with her husband, an honest miller, at the time of the occurrence, she could in no way be connected with it. Her disappearance soon after was a few days' wonder among her intimates. But it was notorious that the ex-seamstress had been less devoted to her husband than to an adventurous artist named M Richard, and as his comrades and the busts he had been sculpturing lost sight of him contemporaneously with Madame's disappearance no one was a a loss to divine what became of her. Colotte she had assigned for Cubs that very atternoon.

All hope of unrawelling the mystery was lost for the time; but M. Leroy kept track of, the absentees during their sojourn in Havana, and, conddent that they would in time return to the city, prepared Mr. Adler-Keller for that event. His anticipations were realized. On Saturday the trio were landed in Broome attest, where they took an apartment, in which all three lived together. Mme. Huot's relations with Charles Ramel were admitted to be of an intimate nature, but Marcel Colotte's position could not be well defined. From subsequent developments it appears that he inherited a sum of money this year from his relatives in France and transferred $4750 it to Mme. Huot for four of the Suez bonds. On his return with her and famel from their junkeing trip to Havans he got an inking of the real character of his purchase and at his ingest of the secure himself. A French at torney whom he employed consulted with him, and, and they claim that he put them in possession of a warrant for the woman's arrest in case she failed to make restitution. Whether this document was apurious or not cannot be ascertained; but certain it is that they accomplished their purpose with it. Mme. Huot, terrified by the menace of the law's invocation, turned over to Colotte fill the ready money she possessed—about $135. Of this M. Leroy came to hear, and he at once made haste to the office of Limburgor & Thalman, where he made known the parties' arrival to Mr. Adier Keller and suggested their purpose with it, he and Detective Murphy yesterday morning they went to the Eight precinct police station, where they laid the whole case before Captain McDonnell and asked for a descent upon the apartments at No. 50 Broome street, where all the parties development and the second of the second of the parties of the colour of the colour of the parties of the colour of the colour of the parties of the colour of the colour of the parties of the parties of the colour of the parties of the colour of the par

DELUDED DEPOSITORS.

THE GRIEVANCES OF THOSE WHO PLACED THEIR MONEY IN JERSKY CITY'S BROKEN BANK-SWEEPING CHARGES AGAINST THE SECRETARY AND OTHER OFFICERS.

The proceedings yesterday in the trial of the officers and directors of the Mechanics and Laborers' Savings Bank of Jersey City, in the Hudson county, N. J., Court of General Sessions, on the indictment charging them with conspiracy to defraud the depositors, were enlivened by the exami-nation of the individual depositors. The attendance was much larger than on any of the five preceding days, and the testimony as given had a marked effect on the jury and auditors.

When Judges Garretson, Brinkerhoff and Fry took their places on the bench District Attorney McGill called to the stand James Chester, who testified that he resides in Hoboken and had deposited in the bank at the time of its failure $4,900; he was led to deposit his money in the bank by noticing a sign in the window stating that the bank would pay six per cent interest on all sums from $5 to $10,000, free from government tax; he went in and asked the secretary, Mr. Donelan, how the bank could pay six per cent when all the other banks were only paying five; Donelan answered him with:—"This is all frish Catholic savings bank and it is more honest than the banks run by Protestants; there is only $2,000 a year expenses attached to it and we get seven per cent on our investments, and in that way pay six per cent interest;" he asked if witness was a Catholic, and was told "yes;" witness told him that he had some money to deposit, and Donelan told him to deposit it with him; when he was told that the money was in New York banks Donelan told him to withdraw it and place it in the Mechanics and Laborers' Bank, where it would be taken care or by Catholics; he said the charters of the New York banks were imperfect and the banks themselves misafe; witness upon these representations withdrew his money from the Union Dime, West Side and Metropolitan banks and deposited it with Donelan; Donelan told him that the bank was run by the most responsible Catholics in the county and asked him it he knew any of the directors; witness said that he did not; in June, 1878, witness went to the bank for the purpose of drawing some money to advance to a German on bond and mortgage, and Donelan said to him, "What do you want to give your money to that Dutchman for? Your money is safe here and you get as much interest on it as you would get on a bond and mortgage;" "in case you are sick," he added, "all the money you have is here and you can get it, but if it was in a bond and mortgage.

"THE ROGUE WHO MADE ALL THE MISCHIEF."

At the time of the bank's suspension, he testified further, Donelan introduced witness to President Halliard and Dr. O'Callaghan, one of the defendants; he was greatly excited over the loss of his money and Dr. O'Callaghan took him into his wagon; while there the Doctor told him that he was sory for the bank's misfortunes, and said that if he would call at his office on November 13 he would have some money; but," added the Doctor, "we have got rid at last of the rogue who has Mr. Donelan, how the bank could pay six per cent when all the other banks were only paying five; Donelan answered him with:-"This is ah Irish the conversations with Donelan and O'Callaghan.

"Then your memory," said counsel, "is very good."

"It is good enough," answered the witness, "for me to remember the men who drove me and mine to the door of the poorhouse."

Continuing his cross-examination the witness testified that Donelan frequently assured him that the bank was the satest in New Jersey; that all the directors were good Catholics; that they were all responsible men and the poorest was worth $100,000 and some of them were worth $500,000; witness testified that he told Donelan some words he had said to him and apologized.

"Were you sorry" asked counsel.

"I was religiously sorry"—(laughter)—answered the witness. Witness remembered meeting Assemblyman Sheersn, one of the defendants, after the failure; he said he accused him of being implicated in the plot to rob him of his money; Sheeran told him he was "a damned liar;" witness retorted that Sheeran and the others were "a set of damned rascals,"

James Dunn, the next witness, a corpulent man, repolably fifty, and was reas and the held.

Sheeran and she others were "a set of damned ras-cals."

James Dunn, the next witness, a corpulent man, probably fity-five years of age, testified that he had $0,360 in the Irving Bank, New York, upon which he was receiving five per cent interest; he saw the ad-vertisement of the Mechanics and Laborers' Bank to pay six per cent, and he brought the money over and deposited it with them; he afterward thought it would be better to put the money in the Fifth Ward Savings Bank, but Donelan told him the bank was unsafe, and he allowed it to remain where it was; he had the money since the war, and had earned it by selling lemons.

"HE LAUGHED AT ME."

"HE LAUGHED AT ME."

Julia McCabe, who was next sworn, testified be-Julia McCabe, who was next sworn, testified between her tears that when the bank failed she had $550 to her own account and to the account of her husband she had $900; she had all her money in the Provident Institution for Savings and told Doneian that they were paying only five per cent; he said they were put ing too much money in their own pockets and advised her to place the money in his bank, where she would get six per cent; he also told her that the directors were all good Catholics and that the money would be safe; "after the failure" said witness, "when I went to that man there 'pointing to Donelan and bursting into tears), he laughed at me when I told him I wanted my money."

Ex-Coroner James F. Gannon, the next witness, iestified that he had a private account or $375 and an administrator's account of $1,300.

"Then," said counsel, "you had two accounts."

"Yes," answered the witness, "just two too many."

He continued to testify that Donelan had besought him time and time again to deposit his money in the bank, and, finally, he did deposit it there; when witness questioned the bank's solvency Donelan told him, "Weil, my dear boy, this is as safe as any bank in New Jersey, and you knew it;" witness answered that he knew nothing about it, and Donelan told him that he knew the directors anyhow; is conversation with Dr. O'Callaghan the latter admitted that he knew of the bank's condition, but he said the directors expected to be able to get enough out of Halliard to put the bank in a good standing again.

After recess other witnesses testified pretty much again.

After recoss other witnesses testified pretty much in the same vein as those above, and the Court adjourned until this morning.

RAID ON A LOTTERY OFFICE.

Anthony Comstock, in the Tombs Court yesterday afternoon, made an affidavit charging that the sale of lottery tickets was carried on at No. 84 Nassau street. Justice Otterbourg gave him a warrant with power to arrest the parties found in the place and to seize all their tickets, money and other with power to arrest the parties found in the place and to seize all their tickets, money and other business property. Policemen Gardner, Hill and Aigier accompanied Comstock. When they entered the place a boy was found in the front room. In the rear office were George H. Meyer, a clerk, twenty-seven years old, and George Smith, an office boy, fourteen years old, and George Smith, an office boy, fourteen years old. There was a stout combination lock safe in a corner of the room, and Meyer shut it as the policemen entered. It is believed to contain a large number of lottery tickets. The proprietors, Max Borger & Co., were not present. Meyer and Smith were put under arrest. Twenty thousand circulars of the Louisiana State, Kentucky State, Saxony, Havana and other lottery companies were gathered together, put into three bags and carried to the court room. Before he left the office Meyer took from a drawer a large quantity of silver and paper money. In court the prisoners were searched, and in Meyer's possession were found two-tenths of whole ticket No. 21,822 in the semi-annual drawing of the Louisiana State lottery, a letter addressed to "Messra. Borger & Co., bankers, No. 34 Nassan street;" two German lottery tickets, numbered 23,545, 33,883, 37,209 and 25,372; 345 in bilis, and $54 30 in silver dollars, halves, quarters and dimes; two old fashioned pennies, and a check for $4 on the First National Bank or Johnston, Pa., drawn to the order of Wachsman & Co., and signed B. T. Schubert. The money was returned to Meyer, but the tickets were kept to be used in evidence against him. The prisoners were not arraigned before the Justice, but were taken to the Fifth precinct station house for the night. They will be examined to-day.

Mr. Comstock says that Max Borger & Co. have an alias of Max Wachsman & Co., and that under the latter name an indictuent in the United States Co. in the tickets through the mails.
